

不死鳥: A Junior Digital to Analog Illustration Project by Alice Rennie

For this project, I decided that I would create an acrylic stand. At first I was torn between making a stand and making stickers, but I can make stickers (or something similar to stickers) at any time at home, and I wanted something new to decorate my shelf with, so I thought that going with an acrylic stand would be a better option.

I decided to make the artwork that of a phoenix - in previous projects, I was inspired by kitsune (foxes, essentially, but with cultural ties to Japan), and I thought I wanted to do something similar, with an Eastern mythical creature. Initially, I was torn between a phoenix or a dragon, but I knew I wanted to draw something with wings, so ultimately I decided on the phoenix. However, phoenixes are more present in Chinese culture than they are in Japanese culture, so please imagine that this is a Chinese phoenix visiting Japan.
