Finding Your Way (cont. x2)

What's your actual superpower? When did you learn you had it? How'd you develop it?

My superpower is the ability to easily make things and understand programs when I see code. Yeah, I know that sounds kind of generic, but I genuinely believe it's one of my greatest strengths, especially with the field I want to go into.
I've had this "superpower" since I was very, very young. I had an easy time understanding basic coding using a JavaScript visual library, and by that time I was already making simple animations. Throughout the years, I developed this superpower, I created more projects, including videogames, in middle school, and it didn't stop at high school either. I easily got a 5/5 on my AP Comp Sci test while barely studying for it, and right now I'm a TA helping others with that same class. Even outside of school, I am hosting a website that I've been developing, and I even got others to help too. Even though my superpower isn't that "super", I'm still glad I have it!

Transcription: Finding Your Clay (cont. x2)

What's your actual superpower? When did you learn you had it? How'd you develop it?

My super power is the ability to easily make things and understand programs when I see code. Yeah, I know that sounds kind of generic, but I genuinly believe it's one of my greatest strengths, especially with the field I want to go into.

I've had this "superpower" since I was very, very, young. I had an easy time understanding basic coding using a JavaScript visual liabrary, and by that time I was already making simple animations. Throughout the years, I developed this super power. I created more projects, including videogames, in middle school, and I didn't stop at high school, either. I easily got a 5/5 on my AP Comp Sci test while barely studying for it, and right now I'm a TA helping others with that same class. Even outside of school, I am hosting a website that I've been developing, and I even got others to help too. Even though my superpower isn't that "super", I'm glad I have it!