A Story of Your Name

When my father was brainstorming names for his son that he would meet in a few months, he came up with a few criteria. All his life, he was annoyed that his name, Alexander, was structured in such a way where it causes people to emphasize the wrong syllables in his last name (Alexander Matulich). This was unlike his sister, who was named a 3 syllable name, Erica (Erica Matulich). Therefore, my father wanted his son's name to be only 3 syllables. He also didn't want the name to be shortened. In the end, it was a choice between Damien and Darius, and while my father wanted Damien, my mom decided on Darius. Funnily enough, Alexander the Great killed King Darius the 3rd. For my middle name, "Kirin", my parents wanted a unique name that no one else has. The name Kirin is based off of "Kirin" as well, which has some cultural significants. In the end, when I entered into the light, I was given the name "Darius Kirin Matulich", and I've held it close ever since.
