

Dragos Andrei Popescu is a student at Freestyle Academy in the San Francisco Bay Area, and has returned to the world of writing with his newest book “Route 666.” A student of design, the book was designed entirely by him. Coming from a Romanian background, Dragos has seen much of the world and hopes that these experiences are reflected in his writing.

“I do not use the word
'Genius' often, but any other word would fail to capture the scope of this novel.”

-John Books

“This is perhaps one of the greatest novels of the modern day, and I hope a movie will be made very very soon.”

-Dragos Andrei Popescu

“We are privileged to live in the same time as this young writer, and I pray we receive more work soon”

By the side of a desolate road on Route 66, sits a modest truck stop, the Mirage.

It's a humble diner, even for one in the middle of the desert. The manager never stays for long, and neither do the customers.

Trucks arrive, but their owners never leave. However, when a new trucker arrives but begins to notice some odd occurrences...

Welcome to the finest diner
this side of the country.
