

Julianne Wilson spends most of her free time writing stories she'll never quite finish, playing guitar, and taking care of her cats. After graduating from University of Oregon with a degree in creative writing and music production, she went on to publish a set of short stories, launching her in to the Young Adult spotlight. After reaching such success, she chose to focus on writing full length novels using personal experiences as inspiration. A Strange Case Indeed, her debut novel based on her high school friends, quickly rose to the top of the New York Times bestseller list, earning it nearly worldwide attention. Currently she resides in Salem, Oregon with her cats Xeno and Charlotte.

"Quirky and unique. Puddles and Whale are dynamic, relatable characters."
- The Whale Times

"Wilson has done it again, balancing almost slapstick humor with the air of a murder mystery."
- Dorvin Bertlete

"A marvel of literature; suspense and tension leave readers grasping for more..."
- Nock Dickerly

Puddles and Whale: A Strange Case Indeed

Julianne Wilson

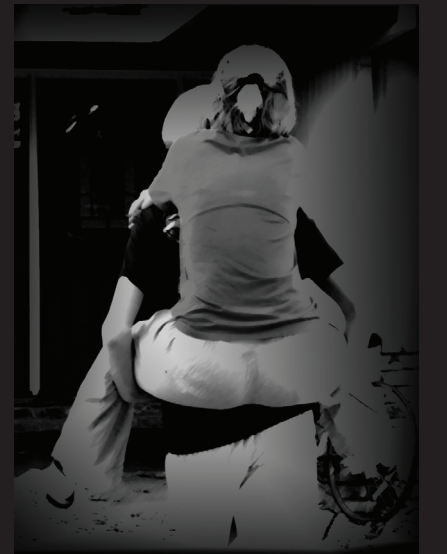

Puddles and Whale: A Strange Case Indeed

By Julianne Wilson

$14.99 US
$12.99 Canada

When private investigators, Puddles and Whale are rudely awoken in the middle of the night by a stranger knocking at their door, they immediately know something is wrong. After a series of unfortunate accidents, they meet Rebecca White a twenty-four year old secretary with a very strange case indeed.

Humpback Publishers

© 1998