History Repeating Itself

In the 1930s Germany had a leader named Adolf Hitler came to power, using labels to discriminate against the Jewish community. He made the Jews wear a star on their clothing and soon placed them in concentration camps, separating families by gender, stealing their belongings, and making them wear striped pyjamas with a number. This event is known as the Holocaust, during which a lot of innocent Jews died. As the 20th Century and 21st Centuries progressed, labels have identified people by name, race, title, personality, and nationality.

But sometimes labels can make a person insecure by the titles you give them like Fat, Mr./Ms. knows a lot, Shorty. And when those types of labels are taken way too far it can even break a person to ruin their lives. For example, in a book called Bronx Masquerade published in 2002, a student named Tyrone Bittings a African-American teenager uses labels for the wrong reasons. His view on labels are close tight boxes where you're easily put into a label. One of the labels that Tyrone give is calling someone a bully even if he did see the whole story. For that person it would be really be hard to break from being viewed as a bully. Even though you're not. As the book process Tyrone learns more about his classmate through the use of poetry an assignment thier teacher Mr. Ward given them. Bring them together. This examples contradicts the fact that even though it's difficult to break a label given to you, you should not stick or live with a wrong label. Prove to everyone that the label given to you is wrong and make them realize that the label you want to wear is your name and your personality that make you unique. This relates to politics because Donald Trump uses labels to attack people of different races, calling immigrants "trouble makers," "drug dealers," and even "rapists," not to mention many other insulting things he says to other human beings. Basically, he uses labels as his power to bully everyone that is not a dominant white male. He discriminates against women, Mexicans, the poor, and disabled people, with no regard for the incredible things they are capable of, like knowing the value of money equals hours of hard work, and he disregards the struggles they have faced in their history. Donald Trump is not the person capable of being the president who will make America a place better to live in for generations to come. However, the problem is that he is capable of becoming president he is well known, rich, and show up on cameos such as movies like Home Alone 2: Lost in New York and TV shows like his own reality show called The Apprentice that lasted 2 years. And many more that exposes his appearance to the public making the people to be familiar to him. He is also popular to the public because he has new ideas that no one has ever heard and said before like during the elections, debates, and campaign. Demanding that the system needs to change and poorly made appealing to those that have the same viewpoint leading them his supporters to his path to victory. Winning the polls.

Labels exist because it is used for identification, acknowledges, and shame calling. There will always be good and bad ways to use labels but those labels should never shape who you are as a person or judged at because of it. One example of labels used in society is appearance, how a person looks a certain way. Based on this example the halo effect has a similar meaning to the word label with some extent they both judge on how a person looks instead on who the person is. Donald Trump gets his supporters by saying outrageous things that most people believe and agree on.

Why is Donald Trump so interesting to watch, how does he use free publicity to get supporters to like him so much using the halo effect, people fighting what they believe in like protesters not afraid of him, and most of all does he act like a 5 year old.

Trump is a leader who promotes violence, hatred, and separation, and who uses fear as a weapon. Claiming America is weak and manipulating his supporters to do what he wants, he is essentially a racist, fascist dictator running for president.

He uses his good looks to fool people in believing strongly in him. Is this called the halo effect where you guess the wrong impression of someone based only on appearance. A cognitive bias in which your brain allows specific positive traits to positively influence your overall evaluation of a person. We assume someone is in an amazing physical condition or very good looking they might also be smart, kind, and generous. That is not the case for Donald Trump. He might be powerful, rich, and have a lot of connections but he is not one who is smart, kind, and generous. Donald Trump should never win the elections because he uses the power to brainwash his supporters that immigrants or anyone in color no matter the age, gender, and status that doesn't support him are the enemies. They are the people that are causing the problems, drugs, and should be feared. One of the words he say to his supporters to act are "Get them out of here, Get them out, Get lost, Go back to your mommy where you came from" Trump. Politics and social media should never mix. They should never use each other to get ratings because most of the time went anyone post anything in social media it is viewed as cool and a must try or even share. What is posted in Social Media gets into the heads of the people viewing the post valid and true. Making America today full of violence and hate in Trump rallies.

Trump is not a good leader because he takes away his supporters true potential to grow. According to management.about.com a website article a leader is sometimes a trait your born with but most of the time you learn how to become a leader with leadership workshops to improve your skills and experince in leading a group. On the other hand, Trump says that "I don't like captured people." But what I believe that this fact makes Trump a false leader and the most dangerous one because he would only fight for the people that follows him if they protect him from hurt of others .He would fight using his power, money, and violence not for the people but for himself, his brand, and his reputation. Depending on who you are and what you are charged with his greed will always bind you from the truth.

Trump is popular because he attracts people that are tired of politicians claiming that they would solve problems once elected. Called political correctness. He is something new to the field of politics changing its system that got the angry mob to love and support him. (Some example of why he is not fit to be president is) because he has worst moral and doesn't visualize the future ahead. A quote from Gandhi on the Article of National Geographic 'Destination Pluto' saying that " Our greatness lies not so much in being able to remake the world, as in being able to remake ourselves" this quote is saying that Trump can not make the world great a again but he can remake make himself again. In what I see that is what he's been doing. He does realize that America is not longer itself, he only wants America great but what about the involvement of America in other countries? He is someone that doesn't understand why capture people are captured in the first place. Like why are people even protesting against a person in power. These people are capture because they a fight for what they strongly believed in. Examples like Joan of Arc telling everyone that he heard a message from God and fight for his belief. While in government people like Nelson Mandela and Martin Luther King Jr who are both influenced by Mahatma Gandhi. Are people who believe that everyone should have a chance in education, opportunities to live a better life, and should be recognized for all their hard work no matter what gender they might be.

They are the leaders with great morals that got America where it is now even if there were downfalls. Another of the quote that Gandhi said that “Nonviolence is not a weapon of the weak. It is a weapon of the strongest and the bravest.” And that is something that Donald Trump can't comprehend because he thinks that violence is all mankind's answer to solve a problem. According to a news article called The Times Of India World Donald Trump misquoting Gandhi. By saying “First they ignore, Then they laugh at you, Then they fight you, Then you win” does this quote sound like Gandhi would say at all? There is no sentence structure and it feels like a quote from one of those movies. Not a lawyer that make you think about his quotes. Donald Trump gains for attention from saying and posting outrageous things to make people react. Using his haters to gain media coverage. You can not win by without fighting back. Winning is not necessarily physical sometimes it takes intelligence and the soul to defeat the leader. You need to be seen and be heard that what you're fighting for is serious business.

You can't fight fire with fire because that would only cause a bigger flame but you do fight fire with water a different approach to the problem. Protesters fight for what they believe is right no matter what other people could to say as long as the Protesters fight as one. There are many types of protesters you don't know if it would cause violence or not but you can't assume that they the don't have right too. Like the news about protesters in Trumps rallies. You can punish a person for unreasonable doubts if you're just a person with no power by saying they deserve it. If the protesters are just silently protesting. It is breaks their Bill of Right as person, everyone no matter what race was one. That concludes my argument about Trump being a leader in America and up next is fear and why everyone has it even Trump.

Everyone has it no matter who you are. It is something that you grow up with and never grow out of. Fear is living in all of us. That somewhere along the line that your fears has been activated and once it's on your fear is creeping against you. Everything you do, done, and going to do is a constant reminder of your fear . An example most people have is stage fright being afraid of doing anything in front of the public. One way is activate this fear is to speak in front of the classroom during a presentation and making eye contact to the crowd while their eyes is peering you like pointy glass. Making the person uncomfortable. But your fear doesn't have to ruin your life most fears can be handled uncontrol, practiced, and calmed. As long as you treat your fear as frightened child that needs to nurtured and well taken care of. Then your fear might save you. There is saying that you have nothing to fear but fear itself. That you have to face your most deepest fears to get over them. Trump on the other hand is a person that crushes your fears away, sounds great right. He says that The savior of your fears, but if he's your savior from your fear of immigrants have you asked yourself if are not afraid of the immigrants or did it cause you to hate them more? Allowing your fear of immigrants take over your judgement.

In conclusion, a repeating event that we should learn from and not relive is the reign of Hitler and the holocaust that inspired George Orwell to write 1984 where it sends a message that a human being can be broken down completely until he'll believe whatever 2 plus 2 is 5 at the same time the book has a positive message as well, that it is really hard to get inside someone's head to a extent the government has to go to incredible lengths to brainwash Winston the main character of the book who thinks individually successfully. For examples that Orwell brought up is the majority is poor and only a few are rich. Making the uneducated. Just following the leader on what he say with no rebuttals. Making his subject of rule of an extreme communist thinking one through nonduality all the same. Big Brother a the leaders that watches your every move represents Hitler and Trump. Telling their followers that War is Peace, Freedom is Slavery, and Ignorance is strength. That are surprising fits Donald Trump morals and position is the elections. He should not be the president of the United States of America because he is not making a America great again. He would only deteriorate the process America made from the past decades going back to the time where his race superior and in power again making the other race started over ending the world. He would be a worst president to represent only one side of the counties that supporters him, not focusing on real proven facts of his statement "political correctness" , and finally foreign (military) affairs that other states (big powers or not) are involved with America. Making him not suitable to be even in the oval office and should be retrial to be overcrown.
